

Ambition to Drive uses cookies to track your visit to our publicly accessible website. By using this service, you consent to the use of cookies.

As a rule, cookies will improve the performance of browsing. We use this information to establish the number of unique visitors to our website, pages navigated, save preferences and providing tracking data which helps us to provide a better digital experience.

What are cookies

A cookie is a small text file which is transferred on to your computer, smartphone or tablet via your web browser to help the site provide a better user experience.

Cookies may be 'temporary' or 'session' cookies, used while you visit our website. They are deleted when you close the browser, or they may be 'permanent' cookies which stay on your device's storage until you delete them manually or they are deleted by your browser after a certain period of time. You can check your web browser settings for more information.

How we use cookies

When you use or access our website services several cookies may be placed in your web browser.

We use cookies for the following purposes:

To enable certain functions of our website service to provide analytics.

To store preferences.

To enable advertisements.

Our site does not keep or use any personal information. Any anonymous information is handled in accordance with our Privacy Policy.

However, you may prefer to disable cookies on our site and on others. The most effective way to do this is to disable cookies in your browser. We recommend viewing the 'Help' section of your browser but be aware that certain functionality may not be available to you.

Third-party cookies

In addition to our own cookies, we may also use various third-party cookies to report usage statistics. This includes social media analytics, Google Analytics and third-party marketing software analytics. This information is collected to see the success of our own advertising campaigns.